The Face of child hunger in America is hidden, making it hard to believe that 12 million children in this country are hungry or at risk of hunger. However, the sad reality is that hunger disproportionately affects our nation's children. Hungry children have a more difficult time learning in school, and chronic hunger can cause permanent damage to their mental and physical development. Child hunger also poses an economic threat by undermining educational investments and workforce productivity. With your help this problem is preventable and solvable. Please contact Feeding Children Better at www.feedingchildrenbetter.org or phone 1-800-FEEDKIDS to see how easy it is to help a child.
